Farzad Naeim is the Vice President and General Counsel at John A. Martin & Associates, Inc., one of the largest structural engineering consulting firms in the United States. He joined this firm in 1982 as a seismic analyst following obtaining his Ph.D. from University of Southern California. Later he became Director of Research and Development and upon obtaining his J.D. he wears the hat of the company's in-house counsel as well. Farzad has authored three books, dozens of software systems and over 120 papers on various aspects of structural and earthquake engineering. His team designed and developed the first edition of the World Housing Encyclopedia website.

Farzad is involved in many EERI activities. Besides being the current editor of Earthquake Spectra, he just finished his term as the Vice President of the Institute and a member of its Board of Directors. He currently serves on EERI's Honors Committee.
